Update on the Tony Martin case

When Norfolk farmer Tony Martin was sentenced to life for shooting a teenage burglar who broke into his home with an older accomplice, there was huge and understandable public outrage. His conviction raised important questions about a householder's right to protect his property, as well as the manifest inadequacy of rural policing. This month the Appeal Court reduced Martin's conviction to manslaughter on the grounds of diminished responsibility, and his sentence to five years. However, the dead boy's accomplice, Brendon Fearon, has already been freed and yet Tony Martin has to wait another full year before being eligible for parole. The conviction of Tony Martin may have made him a killer in the eyes of the British legal system. But to many, especially those in the Norfolk fens, it turned him into a hero in the fight for law and order. The more fundamental underlining question still arises: How could someone be jailed for defending himself in his own home against career criminals intent on stealing his property?

Asylum seekers

Metropolitan police can't cope!

The Metropolitan Police, who recently embarked on a gut-wrenching anti-racist propaganda campaign with various celebrities has now stated that the arresting and detaining for deportation of 30,000 asylum seekers next year will be impossible and it can't cope because there is not the will, inclination or logistics within the force to deal with the problem. At present, London police catch a mere five refugees who have had their applications rejected a day for deportation... Under new government pressure this must rise to over one hundred. The problem is that refugees are well hidden amongst their own communities and are rarely willing to hand themselves over or co-operate. The police are having to waste precious resources catching unwanted foreigners rather than criminals when not allowing them into the country in the first place would be more common sense.

The kind of articles we want

It is unfortunate that the vast majority of articles submitted to Identity are not of the right type for publication. We now feel that it is time to lay out some guidelines for the right type of articles desired so as to allow us to publish a higher percentage than we do at present. We feel compelled to do this to ensure that the energy and time dispensed on writing articles is not wasted but used in the right way for maximum benefit. This, however, isn't a reflection on the high quality of writing we receive, just on the overall theme and thrust. The types of articles required for Identity are those mainly written wholly on a specific subject or topic. What we don't want is long articles that are mainly ideological. We suggest to writers to choose a particular news event or trend or even person, and write an article that is rich in information on your particular choice. What we don't want is articles like "Why I joined the BNP", or "Time to take our country back" which are mainly vague appeals and don't cover anything current. We would also like all references to the author absent from articles, for instance: "I think that..." The two articles on page 8-9 are good examples of what we want: they are written on a particular topic exclusively, and are almost documentary in their style. If people who submit articles to ID observe the above points, we look forward to publishing your work in ever-increasing amounts.

Asylum seekers

Kent asylum-seeker scandal

Refugee children sent across the channel on their own by their parents from French refugee camps are costing Kent County Council fifty million pounds per year! Virtually all are illegal immigrants, dispatched by their parents from their detention camps in France, and smuggled into Dover and Folkestone in the back of lorries. The last six months have seen a dramatic increase in the number of child refugees pouring into southern England. The scandal is that the rules state that they are automatically allowed to stay in Britain until they reach the age of 18, by which time they have integrated into British society and the prospect of them being forced to leave after that is virtually nil. The problem of child refugees being sent to Britain is spiralling out of control.

Immigration

The truth about Bradford - from an Asian!

A new report reveals Bradford's white population fears being swamped by "foreigners". The study, by Ramindar Singh, the former deputy chairman of the Commission for Racial Equality, was written as part the review of race relations in the city headed by Lord Ouseley. The Ouseley Report was published earlier this year but Mr Singh's work has only just been posted on the Bradford City Council's website. Mr Singh says at the start of his study:

"Bradford is becoming a city of two separate worlds; a world of white people and another world composed of a few brown and black diverse communities with their own languages, cultures, religious beliefs, dress and food patterns. "The popular cherished view of three decades ago that these two worlds would fuse into one, once the minority groups have passed through an initial short phase of adjustment, has proved a myth." The BNP says well said!

Time to root-out the Islamic fifth column

Al-Muhajiroun, the foremost Muslim extremist organisation in the UK had a stall in the Biscot district of Luton at the end of October which was part of a recruitment drive. Muslims, chanting the name of Osama Bin Laden called upon members of Luton's 30,000 Islamic community to join the Holy War against the West. Placards were held stating "Islam will dominate the world". Meanwhile, more than 200 'British' Muslims have joined Taliban Forces in Afghanistan and are preparing for combat against British and American troops.

There's nothing new in British Muslims travelling to fight in foreign wars to spread and enforce Islam in other areas of globe. Thousands fought in Bosnia, Kosovo and in Kashmir. Nor is there nothing new when Muslims show disloyalty to their countries of residence or even birth. Their whole religion is based on loyalty to Islam, and nothing else. They recognise no governments anywhere and deplore man made laws in favour of Sharia, the Islamic law code. Al-Muhajiroun, the foremost Muslim extremist organisation in the UK claims to have around 300,000 supporters. If this were true, they have the allegiance of around 20% of the total Muslim population in the UK.

Fifth column within the nation

This constitutes a huge and fast growing fifth column in the heart of our country at a time when we are at war with their kith and kin in Afghanistan. Readers may remember that during the Second World War, America "you remember" that country that stands for "freedom" interned thousands of Japanese immigrants in concentration camps because of doubts as to their allegiances. If anyone is in doubt as to the attitudes of ordinary Muslims, not the wealthy career-politician and "community leader" types, then consider the following. Almost every time he appears in public these days, Tony Blair seems to find an excuse to come out with the now familiar line that "the vast majority of British Muslims condemn fundamentalist terrorism and support our war."

The truth of the matter

But a poll carried out by Sunrise Radio - an Asian-audience station based in London - has shown that Blair is lying yet again! Sunrise questioned 500 Muslims between the ages of 20 - 45 living in Greater London about their attitude to the war. The results showed that 79% of these 'British' Muslims don't support Britain in the war. This is in stark contrast to the overwhelmingly majority of native Britons who support the military action. Meanwhile 91% believe that it is a war between Christianity and Islam. While Blair and Bush go to extraordinary lengths to ensure us that this isn't the case, in this instance they are actually quite correct. This is a war mainly between Islamic fundamentalism and the American Establishment who poured petrol on the extremist fire by allowing decades of ethnic cleansing and dispossession of the Palestinian people in Israel. Meanwhile 98% stated they wouldn't fight for Britain. This is no surprise to us nationalists; it is something that we have been saying for years that those who have immigrated to our shores can never be truly British, despite what the liberal luvvies insist.

Willing to fight for Bin Laden

The most shocking statistic arose when 48% of those questioned stated they would fight for Bin Laden! If this were representative of the whole Muslim population, Bin Laden would have around 1 million people in Britain ready to repeat what happened to New York and Washington in London or any other major UK city! Take for instance, Yasir Khan, 28, from Crawley who was killed in Kabul by a US bomb while fighting for the Taliban. Three young men killed with him were from Luton, where pro-Taliban Muslims launched a vicious attack on a reporter and photographer from the Times a day later. Al-Muhajiroun claims that 1,000 Muslims have left Britain since Sept 11th to go to Afghanistan to fight Britain and the US. 'British' Muslims who go to support the Taliban should be tried for treason and their families should be expelled from our country. All the evidence suggests that there exists in Britain a major fifth column, one that needs to be rooted out!

"Muslims who go to support the Taliban should be tried for treason and their families should be expelled from our country..."

NICK GRIFFIN EXPLAINS: HOW THE 'WAR AGAINST TERROR' IS LIKELY TO BRING ABOUT THE GREATEST OIL SHOCK OF ALL!

One quarter of the known oil reserves of the entire world lie beneath the desert kingdom of Saudi Arabia. According to Blair & Co., the Saudi regime is 'moderate', and a staunch ally for the US-led Coalition. But in reality Saudi Arabia is a corrupt, unpopular and crumbling feudal dictatorship which is likely to be destroyed by the strains of backing a war against followers of its own state religion. Saudi Arabia is the birthplace and financial nerve-centre of the Wahhabi sect of Islam. This accounts not just for the notorious and brutal intolerance of a regime that revels in public executions and amputations for petty crime and 'immorality', and which imposes fierce punishments for even private Christian worship, despite having to rely on 50,000 Westerners to run its economy. It also explains why 15 of the 19 September 11th hijackers were Saudis, and why at least 10,000 of their fellow countrymen have received military training in Bin Laden's various camps.

Less obvious is why the Saudi regime has done so much to create the violent fundamentalist movement of which Osama Bin Laden is just a particularly articulate and daring spokesman. After all, the destruction of the Saudi Royal Family is the top priority not only for Bin Laden but also for the majority of young Saudis.

Corrupt elite

From the poorest illiterate street urchins to 'Born Again' ex-playboys like Bin Laden, a growing army of Saudis believe it is their sacred duty to overthrow the 30,000 pampered, boozing, whoring hypocrites who call themselves the House of Saud but who have milked their country dry and allowed thousands of infidel American troops to park themselves within spitting distance of the most holy places of Islam.

Yet, in fact, the reason is very simple. When the Saudi regime first really got into the swing of enjoying its oil wealth, there was enough for everybody. Within a couple of decades a collection of dirt-poor camel herders were on an average per capita income of more than £20,000 a year.

The fact that the enormous Royal Family included 7,000 Princes, who would each frequently blow more than that in a single evening on gambling, champagne and prostitutes in Las Vegas or Monte Carlo, didn't matter to anyone except a handful of religious zealots.

Expansion

And the easiest way to deal with them was to buy them off, by giving them the right to beat and torture those ordinary Saudis who showed signs of adopting the decadent, Western ways of their royal betters.

Then came the policy of letting them take over not just the mosques but also the education system, and of giving them millions of dollars to blow in their own foreign adventures - funding the global expansion of Wahhabism through religious schools and mosques everywhere from Lahore to Lancashire. It all worked for a while, but then things started to go wrong. The extravagance and corruption of the Princes has managed to ruin even the oil-rich economy of Saudi Arabia. Average incomes have plummeted to just £5,000 a year. Unemployment, unknown ten years ago, now stands at 18 per cent.

These economic problems are being made worse by the fact that two-thirds of the entire school curriculum now consists of 'religious studies', many of them centred on Salafi, a form of Islam which is even more extreme than Wahhabism. With no worthwhile jobs for the ill-educated young fanatics being produced by such a system, and a birth rate of six children per Saudi woman, it is inevitable that the instability will grow and grow.

Even before Bush and his British poodle began their ill-fated war, these factors made the fall of the House of Saud only a matter of time. But with the corrupt regime allowing the American war machine to use Saudi bases for the high-tech turkey shoot of the Wahhabi Taliban, the life expectancy of these 30,000 parasites has become even shorter. And every day that the war goes on adds to the danger of a popular religious revolution.

Western dilemma

This in turn poses Bush and Blair with a terrifying dilemma: They must either find some plausible excuse to end their Afghan adventure quickly and without convincing hundreds of millions of Muslims that, in Bin Laden and Wahhabism, they have finally found a way to stand up to the might of the West; or they must continue the apparently uneven struggle until the collateral damage comes to include the Saudi regime. The problem with that is that the West will find itself facing the Mother of All Oil Shocks when the new theocracy flexes its muscles and either jacks up the price or turns off the taps.

Especially in the USA, many

pro-white nationalists are still unsure what to make of the phenomenon of Islamic fundamentalism. "After all," many of them reason, "these people have been wound up by the consequences of the Zionist domination of our foreign policy. Doesn't that make them our natural allies?"

To which the answer might well have been 'yes', but for one other factor in the politics of the West for the last 50 years - immigration. There is not a significant Western nation without a fast-growing Muslim population in its midst. And, as a result of the Wahhabi petro-dollars flowing out of Saudi Arabia, there is not one of those Muslim populations among which the most fanatical and aggressive version of Islam is not making rapid headway.

Zionism's role

The blood-curdling quotes from the Koran which featured in last month's Identity - and which are the subject of the BNP's 'wake up' call to the British people in a series of leaflets and related initiatives - are not dusty, half-forgotten phrases used when burying granny to these people. They are at the very centre of their existence, both individually and as communities.

The existence of Israel and the Zionist distortion of Western politics certainly have played a major role in awakening this monster, and bringing this last European imperial adventure to a close is the sine qua non of sending it back to sleep. But as long as Wahhabism has any significant base in what the Muslims still regard as Christendom, Islam will remain a mortal threat to the West even if Israel and all its supporters were to vanish from the face of the Earth.

This will be the case whoever runs Saudi Arabia, for it is too late to undo the damage when its present greedy rulers let the Wahhabi genie out of the bottle.

This fact was recognised by Middle Eastern expert Seyyed Vali Reza Nasr, professor of political science at the University of California when he wrote that: "The 'rogue states' (Iraq, Libya, etc) are less important in the radicalisation of Islam than Saudi Arabia. Saudi Arabia is the single most important cause and supporter of radicalisation, ideologisation, and the general fanaticisation of Islam."

American author Stephen Schwartz, writing in The Spectator last month explained the problem in greater detail: "The Saudis have played a double game for years, more or less as Stalin did with the West during the Second World War. They pretend to be allies in a common struggle against Saddam Hussein, while they spread Wahhabi ideology everywhere Muslims are to be found, just as Stalin promoted an 'antifascist' coalition with the US while carrying out espionage and subversion on American territory. The motive was the same: the belief that the West was or is decadent and doomed."

Hypocrisy

"One major question is never asked in American discussions of Arab terrorism: what is the role of Saudi Arabia? The question cannot be asked because American companies depend too much on the continued flow of Saudi oil, while American politicians have become too cosy with the Saudi rulers."

And, although it is too politically incorrect for anyone writing in The Spectator to say so, the same must be said of 'British' Muslims as well. Writing in the Daily Mail on October 26th, Ann Leslie went a little further towards the truth: "Saudi money via so-called Islamic 'charitable institutions' has been bankrolling our own Muslim fundamentalists - who claim benefits from British social security, and who use their Saudi-financed mosques to urge disaffected young Moslems in Britain to mount a jihad against a free world which so foolishly shelters these maniacal rabble-rousers."

Widespread

Wise words, although it is a shame that Ms Leslie felt impelled to fudge the truth by concealing from her readers the fact that Wahhabi influence doesn't stop, as she implies, with the couple of mosques controlled by Fleet Street bad guys Omar Bakri and Abu Hamza. The fact is that the majority of mosques built in our country in recent years have been Saudi-financed, and are hotbeds of Wahhabi extremism and hatred against the unbelievers.

So what is the solution? Contrary to the mixture of anguished indecision and One World opportunism emerging from the Western Establishment, it's really quite simple:

The USA and Britain must stop playing global policeman. We should launch one last blistering round of air attacks on Afghanistan and give the cut-throats of the Northern Alliance enough military hardware to allow them to keep the Taliban busy with ten years of civil war. That's quite enough to make other regimes think twice about harbouring Islamic terrorists who strike against the West, without putting our own soldiers at risk in a war which has no achievable purpose.

The USA must end its aid to Israel, thus forcing the Israelis to ditch their terrorist leader Ariel Sharon and to do a fair deal with the Palestinians.

The West must end its genocidal blockade of Iraq and get its 'infidel' troops out of Saudi Arabia. If that leads to the fall of the corrupt little Kingdom of Kuwait it is of no concern of ours, since Saddam Hussein will gladly sell us all the oil we want, to pay for all the palaces, tasteless monuments and unusable tank divisions he wants.

On the home front, we must close down every last Wahhabi-influenced mosque in Britain and systematically expel anyone who adheres to this brutal creed.

Taken together, these steps would end the grievances which are inflaming the Muslim world, and end that world's infiltration of our own. There is no other way to peace.

Nick Griffin

Islamic Puritanism - the bloody fanaticism of the Wahhabis

The Wahhabi sect of Islam was founded by Ibn Abdul Wahhab (1703-92). Wahhabism is the Islamic version of the most extreme Protestant Puritanism. It demands that Muslims live their lives by the Koran, without the restraining, civilising influence that many Islamic theologians have placed upon it in the centuries since it was first written.

This stripped-down Islam calls for simple, short prayers and will not allow even mosques to be decorated with the name of Mohammed, as such things smack of idolatry. Wahhabis even uproot decorate headstones in Muslim graveyards.

From its earliest beginnings, the Wahhabi cult became associated with the mass murder of its opponents. The Wahhabis sacked the city of Qarbala in 1801 and butchered 2,000 ordinary citizens.

Bin Laden is a Wahhabi, so are the Egyptian fundamentalists who exulted as they hacked foreign tourists to death at Luxor. So are the Algerian terror gangs who have cut the throats of tens of thousands of mainstream Algerian Muslims who have committed such 'sins' as watching videos or reading secular newspapers. The Kashmiri separatists who massacre Hindus are Wahhabis, as are the Taliban. Most important of all, so are the rulers of Saudi Arabia, who continue to fund the worldwide spread of Wahhabism even though Bin Laden has sworn to overthrow them.

Saudi Arabia has poured vast amounts of oil money into spreading Wahhabism. Not just in distant places like Afghanistan, but also in Britain. The majority of the mosques built in the UK in recent years have been funded by the Saudis. Their imams are Wahhabis, and their bloodthirsty, intolerant sect is gaining more and more ground among young Muslims in Britain.

ANNUAL COLLEGE 2001: PRI

After the BNP's outstanding results in the last general election, nationalists in France stated in their publications that what we are seeing in Britain today is the birth of a modern nationalist movement. In recent months the BNP has become recognised as a mainstream contender, attracting huge media interest and subsequent growth in membership and new branches. This is why the BNP's leadership announced the formation of a new once per-year event, with the aim of training and educating the party's organisers and officials with the necessary skills needed to build a modern and well-run BNP. The party's first Annual College took place on the 13th of October in a plush venue in the West Midlands and was an outstanding success attracting just over 100 BNP organisers and officials.

The event combined three different rooms to hold seminars and workshops for various party departments. Throughout the day, a separate video-activism seminar was held in one of the adjacent rooms with members and activists of the Young BNP training in video production and mastering cameras and related equipment.

The theme

The day's main proceedings were held in the main hall, with north west regional organiser Chris Jackson as meeting chairman. The main theme of the event was the up-and-coming crucial council elections taking place on the 2nd May 2002. This was what the event was geared to, and covered topics and issues relating to the election such as community politics, canvassing, campaign mechanics, electoral registers, databasing, campaign security and much more.

The speeches

The first talk came from Director of Publicity Paul Golding with an opening address. Recounting some of the BNP's impressive election results under the present leadership, he said: "These results are not down to the changing winds of time, but testament to a growing and sophisticated BNP machine, fuelled by a tireless and talented leadership, and managed by hard working and increasingly professional organisers and activists. In short, we are getting our act together. We are no longer on the fringe of politics, and we are no longer treated as an irrelevance."

He ended with: "We owe it to our country, our ancestors, our children and grand children to strain every last sinew for the BNP over the next year. It is up to each of us to make sure we succeed!" This was followed by a brief on the BNP's strategy and overall aims in the election from

Director of Group Development Tony Lecomber, who stated that by concentrating in our few target wards rather than dispersing our efforts over an impossibly wide area, we can overcome the present handicap of scarce resources and manpower.

Concentration

He stressed the need for those branches that haven't already established in a ward the firm foundations needed to win to help elsewhere in places where we can win. There were also quality speeches and presentations from a number of other BNP officials and members such as Martin Wingfield, who gave a speech on community politics, Director of Administration Chris Green who gave a talk on administration, BNP local election candidates Colin Smith, John Salvage, Mick Treacy, Steve Smith and Ian Edwards. Several announcements were made during the day, such as new party staff and the planned stewards raffle.

Chairman's speech

The national back up for the campaign was discussed, concentrating on three separate areas, namely leaflets, the internet and media work. Before the mid-day break, those present took part in a large photoshoot outside the venue before relaxing for half an hour. After the break, a separate seminar took place hosted by National Treasurer John Brayshaw on the topic of accounts, finances and the new law governing funding of political parties for regional treasurers and branch fund-holders which stretched to an hour.

After a questions & answers session and another short break, the delegates assembled in the main hall for the closing speech from party Chairman Nick Griffin who concentrated on the BNP's new national campaign against Islam, launched in light of the race riots during the beginning of the year and the carnage in the US. This is the first time the BNP has held such a large and extensive education event, proof and testament to the growing seriousness and professionalism of the BNP!

■ Cannabis sell-out

The decision by Home Secretary David Blunkett to re-classified Cannabis from a class 'B' to a class 'C' drug is bad news for all parents. Mr Blunkett said the aim was to free police to concentrate on harder drugs and improve current legislation. However, with a mere 100,000 people arrested each year for possession the amount of time freed up is minuscule. Medical tests have shown that Cannabis is highly addictive and is far more damaging to health than conventional cigarettes. Cannabis is a dangerous cocktail of over 400 compounds, including 60 chemical derivatives, which convert to over 2,000 different chemicals when smoked. In countries that cannabis is legal such as Holland, criminal gangs have mushroomed in response, not disappeared. What is most amazing, however, is that Mr. Blunkett announced his plans when Labour was waving the crest of a wave of popularity because of the war.

■ Adams forced out of Yorkshire by BNP!

Supporters of Gerry Adams have cancelled a lecture planned for next week, which was to be held in the Yorkshire market town of Thirsk on the subject of the peace talks to Ulster. What wasn't mentioned except for a small by-line in the local papers was that Mr Adams and his leftist friends were charging £5 per head. Had it attracted a capacity audience, this would leave a large amount of money left after the hire fee had been paid off. So in fact Mr Adams was on a fund raising tour in the UK! After an emergency meeting, Yorkshire BNP agreed to a joint action to attempt to stop this insult. Yorkshire BNP launched a press offensive, as well as contacting the local town council with letters of complaint. Leafleting drives were organised, and they received a warm welcome from the locals agreeing that they didn't want Adams in their town. Then news came through from a local garage owner that Adams and his left wing supporters had pulled out due to 'local pressure'. A welcome victory for Yorkshire British National Party!

● Lee Barnes explains the challenges posed to the BNP by...

THE HOME SECRETARY'S NEW HERESY LAWS

History teaches us that the path to tyranny is often taken with small steps. The transition from democracy to oppression in the Modern Age is undertaken via the complicit silence of politicians not the shrill scream of cannon fire. In the past revolutions were undertaken on barricades and battlefields, in the Modern Age they are forged in supine and gutless parliaments with the blessing of weak and corrupt politicians.

David Blunkett's proposal to bring in new laws that will make it an 'offence to incite religious hatred' is such an example of post-modern tyranny. When the liberal elite finally enact the promised plethora of new laws to forbid any form of public dissent those political parties that fail to adapt to this new political reality will find that they become the victim of perpetual state oppression until they are driven to destruction.

Banning dissent

Under the aegis of the 'War on Terrorism', the 'War against Dissent' has already begun. The Constitutional Court in Germany has already allowed a motion for the banning of the NPD to go before it - which will lead to the eventual banning of the first political party in Germany since the early sixties.

The method that the liberal elite will use to enforce their culture of compliance is the continuous use of legislation that prohibits free speech and outlaws any public form of dissent against the prevailing leftist consensus, hopefully under the cloak and emotions of war time.

Repealing legislation

It is the policy of the British National Party to introduce complete and absolute freedom of speech in Britain. This naturally will include a repeal of all laws

Laws to be repealed

The Public Order Act of 1936
The Race Relation Act 1965
The Race Relation Act 1968
The European Communities Act 1972
The Race Relation Act 1976
The Public Order Acts 1986
The Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000
The Human Rights Act 2000

and legislation introduced during the last fifty years that inhibit and stifle freedom of speech. Examples of legislation that will be repealed by a future British National Party government are listed above. This though is not an exhaustive list and there are many other petty laws that inhibit free speech that will be swept away.

Leftist tyranny

The BNP, once political power has been obtained, will unleash a legislative revolution that will free the British People from decades of liberal-left tyranny. True freedom in this country can only be enacted once we sweep away the legislative detritus of the past. The party will of course be forced to modify and code the language which at present we employ, to adjust to the new laws. The very fact that a democratic political party dedicated to the acquisition of power through the ballot box has to resort to such machiavellian means to enable it to stay within the sphere of political legality illustrates just how corrupt and undemocratic the present sham of 'democracy' is in Britain.

Dispensing with democracy

The mainstream politicians of this country are dispensing with the burden of democracy and imposing alien laws and alien political systems upon us, just to sustain their failing grasp on power and ensure their personal place in the rotting edifice of the old order.

Just as the last days of Ancient Rome saw the old political order resort to utter tyranny in order to sustain their power, once the battle between the forces of freedom and tyranny begins no amount of oppressive laws can stop the inevitable demise of liberal-left tyranny and the victory of nationalist freedom.

IMMIGRATION?

OPEN YOUR EYES!

According to Britain's leading population experts, the native British people will be a minority in this country in just a few short decades thanks to hundreds of thousands of immigrants and 'asylum seekers' pouring into Britain every year on ships, cars, planes and lorries. Brits will soon be in the minority in several large UK towns and cities, such as Leicester and London, and nationwide by professional predictions in around 2050.

In many towns and cities, anti-British race attacks and communal violence has exploded. Previous governments have forced businesses to employ immigrants before British workers under the guise of 'gender' and 'local councils' got involved, and 'asylum seekers' in the front of the housing queue.

The Government has not only failed to plan to build up to 5 MILLION new homes on green fields but has also failed to cope with the increase in the UK's population brought by immigration. British history and British culture are now threatened because they might 'without' the immigrants, and our children receive endless multicultural brainwashing at schools.

Our people have become second class citizens at best. And all this when immigrants account for around 9% of the population.

Is this the future you want? Is this the future you want for your children and grand children? A future where our people will be treated as second class citizens? A future where the British people will be in the minority?

The British National Party says NO! The British National Party will not let further immigration and asylum seeking, and introduce a system of voluntary repatriation of immigrants. Immigrants resident in Britain will be encouraged, but not forced, to return to their lands of native origin.

Should they choose to return home, the government should provide all the necessary funds, and should choose to stay, they can, and should be provided the full protection of the law.

The British people were never given the chance to vote on whether they wanted Britain to become a 'multicultural' society. It was forced on us by the politicians against the wishes of the people.

It's not about being against immigrants as individuals. It's about ensuring our people are housed that we have lived in for thousands of years. All people need a homeland. The British need a homeland. Yet every time we vote we vote for more immigrants, we vote for more second class citizens, we vote for more people who are not British.

The BNP is the only party in Britain that will stop immigration and put our people first!

CRIME IS OUT OF CONTROL!

CRIME IN BRITAIN IS OUT OF CONTROL! Every time we switch on our TV or pick up a newspaper, we hear endless reports about murders, rapes, burglaries, stolen cars and muggings. Britain used to be a peaceful country where crime was rare, where old ladies and children could walk the streets at night, without fear of mugging or rape. People could leave their doors unlocked without fear of burglary. Whatever happened?

Newsday's pensioners are mugged in their homes, young children are abducted in parks, and our homes, cars and property are at risk every day from the criminal. Our young people roam the streets, abandoned by the system to a life of crime and degeneracy. What has been done about the crime explosion? Nothing! The courts and the judges are too soft; the politicians would rather help the criminal, and penalise the victim, and the police now have their hands full firmly behind their backs. Society seems powerless against the criminal. What is going wrong?

Believe it or not, it all starts with your vote! To put it bluntly, if you vote Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime and anarchy on your streets! It's as simple as that! The police have to be allowed to do their job, without interference from politically correct Lib-Lab-Con politicians, and the judges and the courts have got to apply stricter sentences. The British National Party is the party of law and order - the only party in Britain that will stand up to the criminal and protect the public. By voting Lib-Lab-Con, you vote for crime, by voting BNP you vote for a crackdown on crime. Simple choice!

importance: the books sold through Freedom Books are written by many different authors, holding a number of different political viewpoints, very few of them being in any way connected with Freedom Books' parent, the British National Party.

The party's mail order book service distributes these books because it is felt that they fill important gaps in public information and understanding of vital national and international issues. AN HISTORIC MOVE? OR JUST THE SAME OLD IRA CON TRICKS?

"It's a genuinely historic decision from the IRA to scrap some of their weapons", announced Northern Ireland Secretary John Reid to resounding applause from the Labour benches. Prime Minister Tony Blair beamed his delight and Speaker of the House, Michael Martin, had to use all his willpower to stop giving his own personal standing ovation. It wasn't just New Labour that welcomed the IRA's move, the Tories too took the opportunity to heap praise on Gerry Adams and Martin McGuinness, with Quentin Davies, the shadow Northern Ireland secretary believing the IRA decision to decommission was "unambiguously good news for the people of Northern Ireland".

McGuinness that legislation would be introduced this session to implement reforms of the Royal Ulster Constabulary to satisfy Republican demands. But, of course, the IRA are very hard to please and Gerry Adams wasn't moved by all John Ried's concessions. He wanted more, "I see no reason why there should be British troops in any part of the country. I want to see all that infrastructure removed. We need to see steps from the British and the Unionists to match the steps from the IRA," he demand. From the response of the Government and the media to the IRA's gesture on arms decommissioning, the British public are under the impression that there has been a momentous handover or destruction of arms.

Mockery

Unfortunately that doesn't appear to be the case. General John de Chastelain, who is in charge of the decommissioning process, inspired little confidence when asked details concerning the arms that had been "put beyond reach". He acknowledged that there was just one decommissioning event.

- He acknowledged that no Government or Security forces witnessed this event;
- He didn't know in which country this event took place;
- He didn't know how long the process took;
- He couldn't say how many

The government was so delighted that "the war was now over" that they immediately announced an amnesty for terrorists still at large and wanted for offences committed before the Good Friday Agreement. This amounted to around 65 terrorists, the majority of them Republicans, gaining an instant pardon.

Gullible

John Reid was beside himself with gratitude to the IRA and instructed that work begin immediately on dismantling Army posts in South Armagh. Within 48 hours, 300 tonnes of equipment, including state-of-the-art listening devices and long-range cameras that have maintained round-the-clock surveillance of the surrounding countryside for two decades, was being winched off the listening tower. He went on to reassure Messrs Adams and

Sinn Féin policy on 'minorities'

Sinn Féin recognises that we live in a multicultural Ireland, which enriches all of us. We are opposed to racism, discrimination, and intolerance of any kind. As a progressive party, we actively promote inclusion and combat prejudice and injustice. As we enter a new millennium, we need to recognise that the influence of other cultures and heritages are positive and enhance us all. We demand:

- An open-door policy for immigrants and asylum-seekers, particularly political refugees.
- The right for asylum-seekers to work and participate fully in Irish society.
- An end to racially motivated harassment and attacks.
- The development of multicultural community-based education programmes to combat prejudice and promote tolerance and inclusion.
- Government-led initiatives to combat anti-gay and lesbian discrimination.
- School-based programmes aimed at combating bigotry and intolerance of all kinds.

arms had been decommissioned; - He couldn't say how much ammunition had been decommissioned;

- He couldn't say how much explosive material had been decommissioned;

- He couldn't say how the weapons were decommissioned.

- He didn't know if more decommissioning would take place.

- He didn't know if there was a timetable for further decommissioning;

Not exactly reassuring is it? But it gets worse. When pressed on the overall quantity of weapons put out of use he replied, "It was the act itself, that was significant". He was then asked, "Would you have regarded it as significant if only one gun, one bullet and one ounce of semtex was put beyond use?".

To which he replied "Yes"!

Concessions

If that wasn't bad enough, he then revealed that he had left the area, leaving the IRA in charge of the site and its contents and he could not categorically confirm that the process he had witnessed could not be reversed! This IRA gesture towards

'decommissioning' was demanded by their powerful friends in America. He is the figurehead for a group of American businessmen sympathetic to Sinn Féin, who are crucial to fundraising 'for the cause'. In the light of September 11th and the subsequent 'War on Terrorism', the IRA was told to 'go through the motions' of decommissioning or lose its American funding.

US funding

Sinn Féin/IRA had no choice. They received £1 million from America last year, and couldn't afford to lose access to that sort of money. Loyalists in Ulster have failed to be enthused by the IRA's 'historic decision'. After 30 years of being bombed, shot at and attacked they have no faith left in the British Government and nothing but contempt for a media that condemns and vilifies them at every turn. Weak Government has allowed IRA terrorism to dictate the agenda in Northern Ireland. The proponents of a 'united Ireland' seem to be in the ascendancy.

BNP LAUNCHES COUNCIL ELECTION CAMPAIGN AND MINI-MANIFESTO

The Labour, Conservative and Liberal Democrat parties have let this country down. They have allowed crime to run out of control. They have wasted £billions of our money on 'asylum seekers'. They sold our freedoms and independence to Europe. They have allowed the destruction of our industrial base and refused to combat unemployment by protecting British industry. They have allowed a world-class health service to degenerate into a sick joke. They have left generation after generation without a decent education. They have turned this country into a mess. This is why you should use your vote in the forthcoming elections for a party that will solve the problems of this country. By voting for one of the other parties, you will be wasting your vote. By voting British National Party, you won't just be voting for better local services, you'll be ensuring a future for your children and grandchildren. With all this in mind, the BNP has chosen the month of November 2001 to launch its campaign for the Council Elections 2002, to take place on May 2nd. Below is the party's mini-manifesto outlining our plans and policies for the forthcoming local government elections.

Crime

Elected BNP councillors will push for greater police numbers in our neighbourhoods. We need police officers on the beat, not wasting time filling out forms or going on expensive 'racism awareness' courses. BNP councillors will push for a policy of "zero tolerance" for criminal offenders. Even if the police and courts won't take effective action, we will "name and shame" repeat offenders and press for the eviction of drug dealers and estate wreckers. We will campaign for the re-introduction of corporal punishment such as birching for vandals and anti-social petty criminals. The families of anti-white racist thugs should face eviction.

Services

Elected BNP councillors will call for a boost in spending on public transport and local services to make up for years of Labour and Conservative cuts. The council must do its bit to promote local tourism and local heritage. We believe that the fundamental purpose of local government is to provide decent services for local people, not to employ council bureaucrats or make profits for private companies. BNP councils will sack overpaid senior executives whose departments let down local residents.

Spending

Elected BNP councillors will call for a halt to all further expenditure that doesn't directly benefit local British people. Liberal-left politically correct pet projects aimed at promoting multi-culturalism must be stopped. All grants to ethnic minority organisations must be halted, and the money saved poured into projects for improving life for local British people or cutting council tax. BNP councillors will press for the establishment of fully staffed youth clubs offering a wide selection of sports and recreational activities to keep youngsters off the streets and out of trouble. Spending must be strictly controlled and reviewed regularly and inefficiency and unnecessary bureaucracy must be rooted out. We will try to cut council tax whenever possible. We will oppose any proposed sell-offs of municipally owned properties such as parks and playing fields.

Environment

The BNP will ensure that waste disposal services run regularly and efficiently. We will encourage the largest possible use of recycling. Road maintenance must be completed as quickly as possible to avoid congestion and traffic. Town planning proposals will be supported only if they reflect a truly British character. Harsh penalties will be introduced to combat litter and ensure a clean and healthy environment. We will strive to improve the quality of parks and conserve and enhance the natural environment and ecological balance in parks. We will refuse planning application on green belt land and will direct new constructions onto recycled brown field sites. We will strive to conserve natural features and keep the air, land and water within each borough free from pollution by monitoring the environment, controlling the release of pollutants, and by taking action against those who create pollution. We believe that "the polluter must pay."

Housing

Run-down sink estates must be regenerated and the quality of housing for British families must be brought up to a decent level. BNP councillors will lobby vigorously for local British people to be given priority on the housing waiting list - before bogus 'asylum seekers' and other newcomers. We shouldn't house outsiders while our own people have to sleep rough. While we support the right of individual tenants to buy, we oppose the privatisation of council housing to 'housing associations' and will work to reverse the privatisations Labour have already forced through.

Asylum-seekers

BNP councillors will oppose the influx of 'asylum seekers' and 'refugees', and will refuse to lavish money on these economic migrants. We believe that the money the council raises through tax should be spent exclusively on local British people to provide quality services for them. By halting all further expenditure on 'asylum seekers', we will be in a position to make substantial council tax cuts, or to increase spending on services - and we'll ask council-tax payers which they want.

VETERAN NATIONALIST MARTIN WINGFIELD EXPLAINS WHY HE IS GETTING BACK INVOLVED!

A former Young Liberal, Martin Wingfield joined the National Front, then Britain's only nationalist party, in September 1975. He was elected to the National Directorate, the National Front's governing body, in 1980 and in 1983 became editor of the party's broadsheet National Front News. In July 1985 he was fined £1,500 after his election address, for a local election in Brighton, was deemed to be in breach of the anti-free speech Race Relations Act. On a matter of principle Martin refused to pay the fine and from November 1985 served three months in Pentonville Prison. On his release he was elected Chairman of the National Front. Martin Wingfield stayed in nationalist politics, editing and publishing over 90 issues of The Flag newspaper, until 1995 when he and his family moved to France. Here he explains why, after six years in the political wilderness, he has joined the British National Party!

When I left Britain with my family in 1995 to run a hotel in France, I was turning my back on nationalist politics for the first time in twenty years. I felt little remorse because I was convinced nationalism was finished and Britain was lost. I believed that the anti-nationalist forces within the media were always going to be too powerful.

Return to Britain

When I returned to Britain in 1999 my feelings hadn't changed and I studiously avoided any contacts with my political colleagues from the past. It would be easy just to blame the spectacular failure of British Nationalism on the media, but we had contributed to our own downfall because of our lack of political acumen both in policy development and party organisation.

It was impossible to produce a plausible case for the then policy of compulsory repatriation after 1980, and the fact we continued to promote it immediately put us out of serious politics. We were branch meeting. This kept our numbers tiny and the Party confined to the lunatic fringe.

Past mistakes

Probably our greatest failing was our naivety when fighting elections. In 95% of campaigns we never canvassed, and apart from a handful of occasions after 1977, our efforts were fatally flawed by lack of organisation. So what makes me think things will be different this time?

Well, we've ditched the compulsion element from our repatriation policy and replaced it arena. I understand that every local party official is now aware of the danger of allowing cranks and oddballs to join our ranks.

They might have been 'good leafletters' but the damage they can do as far as public relations is concerned could destroy a thriving branch. People who insist on extremist postures only help our nation's enemies.

There can be no mistake that the BNP is taking elections seriously and reaping the benefit from a new competitive strategy. The Party's analysis of last year's North End Ward council election was the most in-depth document ever produced with regard to an election by a nationalist party.

The party's General Election results and the Annual College 2001 illustrate that a whole new understanding of election strategy has been born.

Advances

The advances the party has made within the field of Information Technology, together with the excellent Identity magazine and Voice of Freedom newspaper, mean that despite the media boycott we can now reach the British people with our message.

More than any other party, a British nationalist party needs a leader who sets an example to follow, someone who inspires confidence and, above all, is a suitable ambassador for the party.

I first met Nick Griffin in 1976. Then he was an articulate and presentable young man who inspired confidence amongst the swollen ranks of the Party back in our heyday.

In 1985 an internal split sent us on our separate ways and last month was the first time I had spoken to him in 16 years.

Great potential

I'm more than satisfied that Nick has benefited from the experience he has gained in nearly 30 years at the cutting edge of nationalist politics.

He turned in impressive performances against TV and radio's most formidable interviewers after June's General Election. That success on prime-time television ensured the continuity of the BNP's high profile in the wake of the Oldham and Burnley results, and set the party on its way to next May's local council election campaign.

The air of expectancy at October's Annual College in the West Midlands reminded me of the branch meetings in the Autumn of 1976.

That was the only other time the party had broad-based public support for its policies. We failed to capitalise on that support then, but hopefully this time we will have learned from our mistakes and will not let the opportunity slip once again.

too lax with party membership and discipline, allowing a variety of oddballs to join and stay in our ranks scaring off any new members at their very first

Bonfire Night 2001 - East Midlands

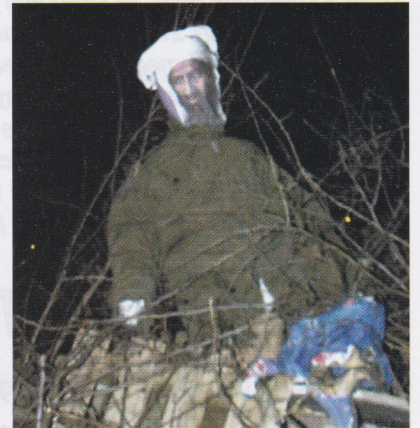

Mansfield BNP again hosted their now traditional Hallowe'en/Guy Fawkes celebration at the end of last month. The turnout was the biggest ever, with around 200 people attending. Osama Bin Laden made a special guest appearance, sitting on top of the bonfire, which was lit by BNP Chairman Nick Griffin! The crowd enjoyed another dramatic BNP fireworks display, together with a barbeque and a full licenced bar.

After the fireworks the children chased around the village green while the older ones played pool and the adults chatted and enjoyed the company of so many like-minded nationalists.

Increased turnout

There were a few guests from as far afield as London and Manchester, but the vast majority of the members and supporters enjoying the evening were from the East Midlands. The increased turnout not only shows how quickly the party is growing in the area, but also gives some idea of just how big the event will become in future years, as more and more people discover that this event is well worth travelling for. Many thanks to everyone who worked so hard to make the event such a success, particularly the ladies who provided the food, the expert barbeque chefs, and the member who donated all the sweets for the youngsters.

Trafalgar Club Dinner - West Midlands

The Trafalgar Club held its annual dinner on 20th October, the eve of the anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar. The function was held in a smart dining room in a Shropshire hotel renowned for its excellent food and hospitality. More than 40 members and guests, many in full 'black tie' evening dress, assembled for pre-dinner drinks before enjoying a four course meal which featured something from each of the countries of the British Isles.

Portions of haggis with whisky sauce proved a favourite starter from Scotland, while beef cooked in Guinness married up England and Ireland to commemorate the fact that Nelson's force which beat the French and Spanish fleets in 1805 included sailors and soldiers from Ireland as well as England, Scotland and Wales. The Welsh flavour was provided by leeks and several of the cheeses available on the extensive cheese board.

Making the difference

The guests were able to enjoy a range of excellent real ales and some very decent house wine, and, above all, the company of like-minded patriots whose generous support makes the Trafalgar Club such an important fund-raising group for the party.

The after-dinner speech was given by BNP Chairman Nick Griffin. Mr. Griffin began with a brief revue of high points of the previous year, then went on to explain some of the many ways in which Trafalgar Club funds had "made all the difference."

Then he moved on to consider the opportunities and dangers presented to the party in the post September 11th world, concluding with a reflection on how Horatio Nelson and the men under his command must have felt that very evening, 196 years ago, and how they went on to fight like lions for Britain. The following day, those guests who had stayed over at the hotel or in nearby B&B accommodation made a group visit to Stokesay Castle, renowned as the finest fortified manor house in the whole of England.

The tour around the thirteenth century gem was a fascinating excursion into a little piece of our heritage, made all the better for being on quite a crisp, but sunny, early autumn morning.

On the up

We're sure that next year there will be even more Trafalgar Club members attending what is now a permanent feature in the BNP's calendar of events. The Trafalgar Club is definitely on the up!

YBNP HOLD NORTHERN ACTIVITY EVENT

The Young BNP held its first Activity Event in the North from the 25th to the 27th of October. On the agenda were not only assorted leafleting in schools and universities, but loads of fun as well and a chance for YBNP members to get to know each other.

The Leeds University area was the first destination, with a solid day of leafleting and distribution of calling cards. Young BNP members also took a dislike to the "Gay Liberation" posters in the Student Union building and kindly done the majority of decent students a favour by removing them! Also included on the agenda was a day of paintballing in the woods of Cheshire. Mark Collett, YBNP Chairman, must be congratulated for organising an event that all those who attended will remember for a long time.

'Gay' liberation? Scrap Section 28? The Young BNP disagrees!

- All branches standing candidates next May in the council elections please send photographs and biographical details of candidates as soon as possible to: PO Box 28, Erith, DA8 2ZN.

- Where We Stand is a cheaply produced BNP mini-manifesto, with sections on all the major issues of the day written in clear-cut and understandable language. Where We Stand is the ideal item to include in information packs, and to have available at branch meetings. 30p each post free or £7 per 100 plus £4.15 p&p.

A ROUND UP OF THE MONTH'S PARTY NEWS

- A new fund-raising initiative is being launched by Bexley Branch, called the 'Invicta Club'. Members of the club will receive a copy of the official party magazine Identity and 10 copies of the party newspaper Freedom. Membership of the club costs £10 a month - that's just 33p a day, less than the price of a daily newspaper. The club has been formed to help raise funds for the council election drive in the area.

- An excellent local meeting was held in Hull on Monday 29th attended by over 50 people. Chaired by Diane Bridgeman, she announced that she is to stand as a candidate next May. Next to speak was local organiser David Hannam. The collection raised well over £300 for local funds. The main speaker of the evening was Chairman Nick Griffin, who spoke about how the main parties has left Hull and other places like it awash with drugs, asylum seekers and crime.

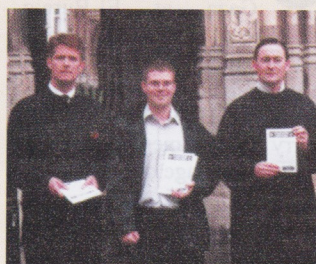

- An outstanding local meeting was held in Doncaster on the 28th October, which attracted around 40 people and was chaired by Yorkshire regional organiser John Brayshaw. Local organiser Bill Bunting appealed for more people to become active within the branch. A collection was then held which raised £425. After the collection, National Press Officer Phil Edwards spoke on the subject of political correctness and the way this ideology is destroying everything that is British. Chairman Nick Griffin then spoke about the way in which a hundred years ago, people in Doncaster and elsewhere built a party to stand up for them - the Labour party. Now that the Labour party has sold them out it was time to build a new party to rebuild Britain, and that party is the British National Party. Mr. Griffin's speech was followed by a lively question & answers session.

- Oldham branch held a lively meeting on the 21st of October which was chaired by regional organiser Chris Jackson. Around 50 people were in attendance. First to speak was local organiser Mick Treacy, who with his team have successfully established a branch in the town. After a buffet and a collection that raised around £350, National Press Officer Phil Edwards gave a speech. He spoke of the work performed by the party's national press department, and his own dealings with the media. He finished by stating that the British people have lived in these islands for thousands of years, and millions have died to defend our homeland, and we should not allow anyone to take it away from us.

- The highly successful Bexley branch of the party also held a lively meeting on the 8th of October, attended by around 40 people. The meeting started with a briefing from local organiser James Seadon, who spoke of local initiatives and campaigning in the branch target ward of Northend. The next item on the agenda was watching a video of the hilarious Jeremy Paxman interview of our Chairman Nick Griffin on the BBC's Newsnight programme. Next to speak was BNP Director of Publicity Paul Golding, who gave a talk on Islamic extremism and the events in America and Afghanistan. After a short break, guest speaker Bob James took to the podium to give an excellent speech on the state of Britain.

- BNP activists leafleted Canterbury and York Cathedrals this month with new anti-Islamic leaflets aimed at churchgoers. The leaflet warned that Christianity is a dying religion and warned of the growing menace of Islam. The activities gained the party bundles of publicity and were well attended. Below London and Kent BNP members can be seen handing out the leaflets outside the ancient gates of Canterbury Cathedral. Well done to everyone who took part.

- The BNP's campaign against Islam received a boost when the large circulation newspaper the Sunday Mercury covered the story of our activities, including re-producing our main leaflet in full with web address and phone line clearly visible!

- Almost fifty people turned out for the inaugural meeting of Gateshead BNP late last month. North East Regional Organiser Kevin Scott opened the meeting and spoke of the need for a vibrant BNP organisation in this overwhelmingly white, but depressed area south of Newcastle. Director of Development, Tony Lecomber then spoke of how the party was ready to take advantage of any electoral breakthrough that may come its way. After a collection called by Regional Treasurer, Dave Guynan, raised £130 for the new group, Trevor Hughes from Darlington then spoke of his experience canvassing in Oldham and some of the antics of the anti-British council in the town. Following an interval, Tony Lecomber called for volunteers for the group's first leaflet drive and for others to pursue enquiries into the party by interested individuals. The highly successful meeting was then closed for supporters to get to know each other socially over a friendly glass of ale.

- Northants BNP held its first ever meeting last month in the county town of Northampton where two-dozen party supporters heard Director of Development Tony Lecomber and Beds & Bucks Organiser John McSweeney speak. Tony Lecomber spoke first and outlined the way in which the party had become more professional over succeeding years before amusing the audience with anecdotes of party officials being interviewed by various media. John McSweeney then spoke on the need to become more active and he summarised the way in which Beds & Bucks BNP had started out with just a few members. Meeting Chairman Larry Nunn then informed the audience that the day was St. Crispins' Day - the anniversary of the Battle of Agincourt and the whole audience drank a toast in wine to the memory of those brave patriots of yesteryear. Following on from which, Larry used a flip chart and plan of battle to talk the audience through one of the greatest victories of English Arms (Britain was yet to be) where the badly outnumbered English Army of King Henry V had defeated a numerically vastly superior foe. A bottle of wine was presented to Activities Organiser Pete Forewell in a small recognition of his contribution in the field of activity.

■ French nationalists gear up for next round of elections

Presidential and parliamentary elections will take place in France early next year, and both the Mouvement National Republicain (MNR) led by Bruno Megret and the Front National (FN) led by Jean-Marie Le Pen are gearing up. Le Pen launched his campaign with an election 'caravan', a convoy of vans covered in FN material went on a speaking tour of France in 33 days, which was organised by the FNJ. Meanwhile the MNR has launched a campaign against Islam, and Megret has embarked on a press offensive to build his profile. The FNJ and the MNJ, the respective youth wings of both of the movements are putting up joint lists for the forthcoming student elections, proof that nationalists in France are moving beyond the divisions that have plagued the cause for the last two years. Most opinion polls state that Le Pen is set to obtain around 10% of the vote, taking third place. Both movements held successful "Summer Universities" in recent months, an important event on their calendar to provide training and education for future campaigns. Le Pen plans to retire after the presidentials, a move which would speed up the unification of the French "droite nationale".

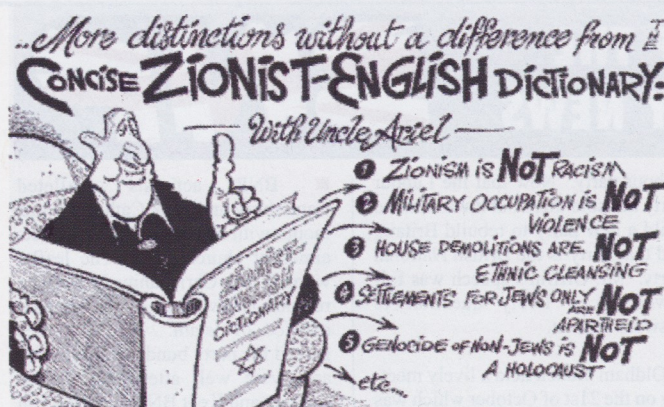

■ More from Norway

After a lifetime in the political wilderness Norway's nationalist Progress Party now have a say in Government! In the last issue of ID, we explored the recent Norwegian election results. At the end of October the ruling Labour-led Government resigned and was replaced by a centre-right coalition led by Christian Democrat Prime Minister Kjell Magne Bondevik. The coalition has to rely on the 26 Progress Party MPs for its majority. Despite still being a minority voice in Norway's 165-seat parliament, the Progress Party will now be able to push ahead with its own legislation, confident that it will have the backing of the Christian Democrats. High on the agenda will be controls to limit immigration to 1,000 new entrants a year, and to deport asylum seekers who break the law.

Ariel Sharon: butcher of the Middle East!

Ariel Sharon, the incumbent Prime Minister of Israel, is nicknamed "the Bulldozer". It doesn't take more than one brain cell to wonder how he acquired such a tag. Born in 1928 in Kafr Malal in Israel, as a young man he joined Haganah, the underground military organisation of Israel in its pre-state days. In 1953 he was given command of Unit 101, whose official mission was to retaliate against Arab attacks on Israeli villages. However, the reality is that the purpose of Unit 101 was that of installing terror by discriminate and murderous violence not only against normal able bodied fighters, but Arabs of all ages including children.

Sharon's first documented sortie was in 1953 on a refugee camp south of Gaza at El-Bureig. Israeli records state that Sharon and his men killed around 50 refugees in an orgy of killing. In October of 1953, Sharon and his merry band of men attacked the Jordanian village of Qibya.

Mass-murderer

According to Israeli historian Avi Shlaim: "Sharon's order was to penetrate Qibya, blow up houses and inflict heavy casualties on its inhabitants. His success in carrying out the order surpassed all expectations... The village had been reduced to rubble: forty-five houses had been blown up, and sixty-nine civilians, two-thirds of them women and children, had been killed."

His reputation for being hard to control began with the Suez War, 1956, when he led a para-troop unit to capture an entrance to the strategic Mitia Pass in the Sinai. In the early 1970s he was head of the Southern Command of Israel's Defence Forces during which he was charged with the task of pacifying the Gaza strip after the 1967 war. Had'd street, a narrow ally weaving through Gaza City's refugee camp earned the nickname of "Wreckage Street" after a visit from Sharon and his soldiers. By the time Sharon had finished, hundreds of homes had been destroyed throughout the whole camp. The Arab refugees were terrorised and many of those with political activists in their families were rounded up and taken off in trucks.

Butcher

Throughout 1971, he uprooted 16,000 people from over 2,000 homes. He was applauded in 1973 for directing Israeli troops across the Suez Canal to encircle and trap Egyptian forces, turning the course of the Yom Kippur war. In October 1973, he was the Founder of an Army Special Commando unit for retaliatory operations. In 1981, as Defence Minister, he visited President Mobutu of Zaire.

Mobutu asked Sharon and his entourage to use their offices to get the US Congress to be more forthcoming with aid. Strangely this happened, and Mobutu re-established diplomatic relations with Israel. He was forced to resign as Defense minister in 1983 when he was indirectly responsible for the massacre of Palestinian civilians by Lebanese militiamen at the Sabra and Shatila refugee camp during which infants, children, women (including pregnant women) and the elderly, some of whom were mutilated or disembowelled before or after they were killed.

An official Israeli Commission found Sharon responsible for the massacre. He refused to resign, but was relieved of his duties although he remained in the cabinet.

Madness

While still Minister of Defence, he approached the Israeli Prime Minister, at the time Menachem Begin, and appealed for Begin to cede control of Israel's nuclear trigger to him. For some strange reason Begin refused! Sharon has continued to cultivate his image as a hardliner.

In 1979 he voted against a Peace Treaty with Egypt. In 1985 he voted against a withdrawal into southern Lebanon. In 1991 he opposed Israel's participation in the Madrid peace conference. In 1993 he voted 'no' on the Oslo agreement.

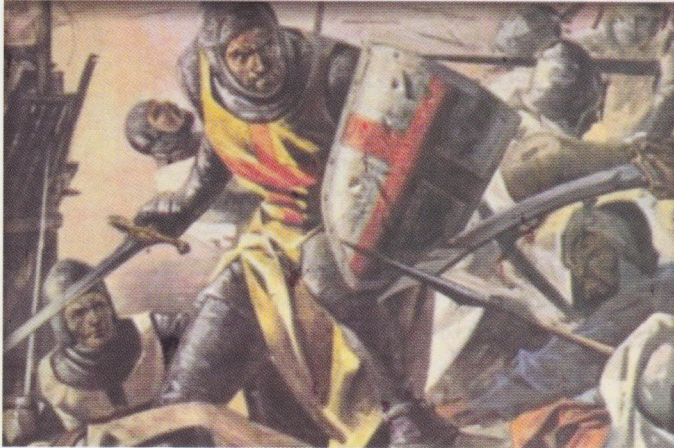

In 1997 he voted against the Hebron agreement. In 2000, accompanied by hundreds of police, Sharon made a provocative visit to the area Muslims call the Noble Sanctuary, atop the Temple Mount in Jerusalem, sparking riots that became a Palestinian uprising.

In any civilised state, Sharon's history would cause him difficulties with his political ambitions - but not in Israel!

Paul Golding

The Christian Crusades

Just over 1000 years ago the homeland of western civilisation was under threat of invasion and occupation by a "green menace" emanating from the Arabian peninsula. The threat was recognised by both religious and secular leaders in western Europe as being so important to the core values of society that hundreds of thousands risked their lives and thousands died fighting the "unbelievers" in that period of history known as the Crusades.

Starting out as little more than a cult, the son of a poor nomadic family who had eventually settled in the Arabian city of Mecca, Mahomet was able to convince large numbers of his fellow Arabs that he was the chosen prophet of Allah, the Moslem God with a divine mission to convert the idolatrous Arabs to the doctrines of Allah.

It was a mission he achieved masterfully and he was able to unite his fellow Arabs and subdue all other tribes on the peninsula. When Mohammed died in 632 he was succeeded by Abu Bakr, a blood thirsty Caliph who led Arab armies into Syria and Iraq.

Islamic advance

Centuries of warfare throughout the near east and Mediterranean followed. A coalition of Arab tribes and African Berbers swept through North Africa across the Straits of Gibraltar conquering Spain.

Their advance over the Pyrenees was only stopped at the historic battle of Tours in southern Gaul (France) by Charles Martel, the grandfather of Charlemagne. Forced conversions to Islam, atrocities against women and children and harsh taxation imposed on the non-believers are well documented and such barbarism is in direct contrast to the idea that the Islamic invaders were peace loving and tolerant of the non-Islamic European beliefs in other Gods.

To the east, Arabs had in 640AD occupied Jerusalem the spiritual homeland for those in Western Europe who had embraced Christianity.

Those Westerners who undertook pilgrimages to the Holy Land returned with tales of how the Moslems had desecrated those holy places dear to Christian believers and how they had slain and tortured pilgrims.

The first crusade

In 1071 the defeat of 60,000 Byzantines by 100,000 scimitar wielding horsemen of the Seljuk Turks at the battle of Manizert led to a plea from the besieged Byzantine Emperor Alexius to Pope Urban II.

This sparked the First Crusade. The Pope's message attracted thousands of noblemen from all over Western Europe, with the specific aim of recapturing Jerusalem.

This was achieved after a long siege in 1099 and remained in Western hands for nearly 200 years. The Crusades that took place between 1071 and 1270 resulted in a mix of successes and some military disasters.

Tens of thousands of whites died; sons of aristocratic families from Flanders, Normandy, England and Prussia. The attempts to secure for all time a hold over the Holy Land were frustrated by the zeal and warcraft of the Moslems.

An artists impression of the siege of Jerusalem

The consequences of the Crusades were of mixed fortunes for the West. The concept of the nation state developed in importance and secular monarchs challenged the dominance of the Pope leading to the Renaissance.

The Byzantine Empire (now Turkey) which had been a buffer between the west and the east was wholly destroyed by the centuries of fighting and the vacuum filled with the Ottoman Turks nurturing a very intolerant version of Islam. The Ottomans were to prove a thorn in the side of Eastern Europe right up until the early 20th century.

Achievements

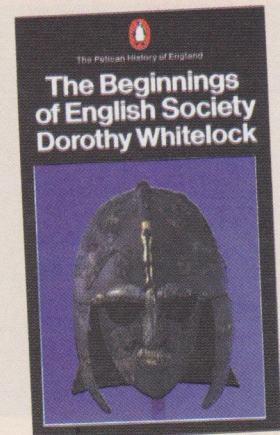

The rise and flourishing of the religious military orders of the Knights Hospitallers and the Knights Templars brought about a rebirth of lofty ideals and noble fighting spirit.

They were a true aristocracy that was both benevolent to those in need yet ready to bear swords to protect its ideals. Probably the single greatest achievement of the Crusades was that the sacrifice of the tens of thousands of our western European folk was not in vain - Europe remained white and Christian and did not succumb to the Islamic hordes!

MONTHLY REVIEW

The Beginnings of English Society, reviewed by John Armstrong

This book remains one of the most readable and accessible works on early English history from the departure of the Roman legions in the 5th Century to the Norman Invasion in 1066. The book concentrates on the Anglo-Saxons, who led Western Europe at the time in question in the field of literature and culture, and their relations with the Celts.

Historic age

This in many ways the most heroic period of our Island peoples history, the Age of Arthur, and the remarkable story of Alfred the Great who came to the throne of Wessex largely by accident and created the foundations of the English Nation.

At a time when our history is under attack through the national curriculum and other deliberate falsifications, I would suggest that at the very least, every patriot should buy this book and having read it pass it on to a younger member of their family in order that they in turn can marvel at the grandeur of their ancestors who were civilisation builders beyond compare.

Heritage

Like all good books, this one will wet the readers appetite to immerse themselves in more of our long and noble history, culture, and traditions and in these times one cannot do that often enough.

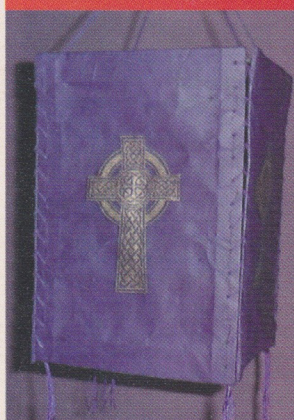

The beginnings of English society is available from Freedom books at £6.99p, PO Box 20, Mansfield, Notts, NG19 6HP.
